BAND'S WORK APPRECIATED

Bethel, Maine, July 19th, 1939

My dear Editor:—Will you please express through your columns my thanks to the audience who listen to our Band Concerts, for their kind observance of my request to refrain from the blowing of horns during the concerts. I noted this season very little noise, and we could enjoy the music so much more without it. We surely must feel proud of our Bethel Band, and the good work they are doing under their Conductor. Let us help and encourage them all we can by our presence, our financial support, our applause the same as at any concert; and refrain from all that would disturb or detract from the beauty and effect of their good music.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) EMMA L. CHAPMAN

MAN INJURED IN HAY RACK SMASH

Thaddeus Luxton of West Bethel escaped serious injury Saturday afternoon, although he suffered severe body bruises, when he was dragged in the road by a frightened team. The accident occurred at the home of Fred Bean on the Locke Mills road where Mr. Luxton was working with his son Alton during haying.

As Mr. Luxton stepped on the pole to get into the hay rack the horses started before he could reach the reins. The rack soon struck a tree and Mr. Luxton was dragged some 50 feet before the horses became separated from the front wheels. He was confined to his bed several days but now is much improved.

Alton Luxton, who tried to stop the team at their heads after their start, and his five year old son Carroll who was in the rack, escaped with little injury. The wagon and harness were damaged considerably and the horses suffered minor scratches.

Miss Margaret Hamlin, who is attending summer school at the University of Maine, was the week-end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hamlin.

BETHEL LOSES THREE IN ROW

Bryant Pond 2—Bethel 1
Lacking three of their sluggers last Friday night, Bethel lost 2 to 1 to Bryant Pond in an eight inning game. Hood and Robertson each collected doubles in the fourth to score their only run of the game.

Bryant Pond got to Gill for three hits and a hit batsman in the seventh to tie the score, and scored the winning run in the eighth when Langway walked, was sacrificed to second by Chase, went to third on Farrington's single and scored on Bryant's ground ball.

Rumford Point 8—Bethel 7

Bethel dropped another game Sunday to Rumford Point 8 to 7 in a protested game. Thurston pitched and kept the hits scattered until the seventh when Gill relieved him with two out. Gill went into the game without warming up and they managed to score the winning run off him in that inning. This was Bethel's second straight loss and the third of the season.

Bryant Pond 13—Bethel 10

Bethel continued their losing streak Wednesday night when Bryant Pond got to two pitchers for 12 hits to win 13 to 10. Bethel started the game with several sparkling plays but then more than made up for them by their errors.

In the second inning Chase hit Bartlett in the head with a pitched ball, but he was able to continue the game.

"Wally" Morgan started for Bethel was knocked from the mound in the third and was relieved by Gill who wasn't much more effective.

Maguire was the outstanding batter for Bethel, getting two singles and a double out of four times at bat. Stanley went hitless for the first time this season.

People and Spots in the Late News

MAKING AIR HISTORY . . . Regular transatlantic passenger flying, just a dream less than a dozen years ago, became a reality with this epochal take-off of the Dixie Clipper from Port Washington, L. I. The four-motored, 41-ton plane carried 22 paying passengers—six of them women—a crew of 11, and 408 pounds of mail.

FAST-WORKING NETTER . . . Diminutive Frank Guernsey of Rice Institute, Houston, Tex., won one of the briefest finals in major tennis title annals when he retained his national collegiate title at Haverford, Pa., by sweeping through Chester Murphy, one of the University of Chicago twins, in less than an hour, at 6-1, 6-0, 6-1.

HEADS CRUSADE . . . Mrs. Melville Muckelstone, former national president of American Legion Auxiliary, plans enlistment of two million women crusaders against "consumer-penalizing taxes" following her recent election to presidency of National Consumers Tax Commission.

CREPE FOR COOLNESS . . . This classic little spectator sports frock is of white crepe with a sash of blue crepe tied around the waist like a cummerbund. Its youthful simplicity is accented by its button-down-the-back closing.

MAN VS. MARS . . . Fashions for Frenchmen produce some grotesque effects as war clouds darken diplomatic skies. This outfit, designed for protection in time of air raids, was displayed at an air raid precaution exposition in Paris. It is an overall mask suit, with special sacks for provisions.

INDUSTRIAL SOCIOLOGIST . . . Election of Dr. Alan Valentine, 38-year-old president of Rochester university, to directorate of Freeport Sulphur company was acclaimed as an important milestone in American business and as "example of industry's recognition of its enlarging responsibility to American people." Board Chairman John Hay Whitney pointed out that "the future of the country and all its citizens is closely bound up with the contributions of corporate business to the job of making democracy work."

An Electric Water System Is Second Most Vital Farm Need

Hot and cold running water helps make kitchen work easier.

By IRA MILLER
Rural Electrification Bureau

AS IS but natural, to most farm families who never have known its advantages in their own homes, the coming of electricity primarily means clean, steady, safe, ample and instantly-available light. Although a modern radio, without batteries, really ranks second only to lights in the average farmer's electrical desires, an automatic water system actually is second in importance. For running water, under pressure, in his home and farm buildings contribute immeasurably more to his health, comfort, convenience, safety and profit.

An electric water system will pay for itself many times over in labor savings alone. The average farm home requires from 20 to 30 tons of water per year for kitchen use only, to which must be added the large quantities needed each wash day and for bathing. Although the labor of pumping and carrying such a tremendous amount of water always is an unpleasant burden, it is particularly so when rain, snow, ice and winter winds make each frequent trip to well, spring or cistern an unpleasant and often dangerous journey.

An automatic water supply guards the family's health by providing clean, fresh water at all times. It promotes better living and pride of ownership as it makes possible not only a modern bathroom with all of its many conveniences and comforts but also a kitchen sink, laundry tubs and hot water at the turn of a faucet.

A pressure water system is a definite safety precaution as it provides a means of saving the farm home or barn in event of fire. The old bucket brigade seldom is a success, as is proved by the fact that nearly three-quarters of all property involved in rural fires is completely destroyed.

With an electric water system, ample water to irrigate small or large truck gardens may be pumped from wells, streams, springs or pools—a most valuable form of "crop insurance" when drought occurs. In fact, the profit on or saving of such crops will pay for the electricity used many times over.

Plenty of fresh water also will increase profits from livestock—animals will finish better, both cows and chickens will produce more, horses and mules will do more work, and there is less danger of contaminated milk if the floors of the dairy barn and milk room are flushed daily.

With all of its advantages, an automatic electric water system costs only a little more than a large all-wave radio, though plumbing fixtures and supplies are additional items of expense. Naturally, operating costs vary with the quantity of water used, the depth from which it is pumped and the cost of power. However, on the average farm all the water necessary to satisfy every human and animal need can be electrically supplied at an operating cost of three to five cents a day—frequently less.

IT'S THE MOST ECONOMICAL CAR IN ITS FIELD!

And remember this—Chevrolet's 85-h.p. valve-in-head engine excels in performance as well as economy.

Only Chevrolet gives you all these features

EXCLUSIVE VACUUM GEARSHIFT • NEW AERO-STREAM STYLING • NEW BODIES BY FISHER • NEW LONGER RIDING-BASE • 85-HORSEPOWER VALVE-IN-HEAD SIX • PERFECTED HYDRAULIC BRAKES • NEW "OBSERVATION CAR" VISIBILITY • PERFECTED KNEE-ACTION RIDING SYSTEM with improved Shockproof Steering (available on Master De Luxe models only) • FIFTY-TO-MATIC CLUTCH

THOUSANDS of motorists have subjected 1939 Chevrolets to the Mileage Meter test. In cars with gauges feeding a measured quantity of fuel to the engine, these thousands have seen how the 1939 Chevrolet stretches out each gallon of fuel to make it go farther—extra miles farther.

What about oil? The fact is that the 1939 Chevrolet is unbelievably economical of oil—because the oil stays in the engine.

As to upkeep and tires—every motorist knows of Chevrolet's traditional record for low cost of maintenance.

See your Chevrolet dealer today! Take the wheel and learn of Chevrolet's remarkable economy.

In the terrific shower of last Wednesday afternoon, two cows owned by G. P. Bean were killed by lightning. At Mayville the full violence of the shower was felt and some damage was done; lightning entered the Riverside House smashing the telephone, box, but doing no further damage. A hen house owned by Mr. Smith suffered some damage.

There were 22 Portland tickets sold at the Bethel station Friday,

"THEY TELL ME"

Well I was talking with a Certain Person the other day and after a while this person remarked that it seemed kind of funny that they still arrest folks for "bootlegging" now days. According to the Certain Person this awful practice was supposed to have died about simultaneously with the death of Prohibition. This was back a few years when we were given to understand that if everybody agreed to make it all right to sell booze instead of a lot of expense in trying to enforce the foolish cruel law which was making hypocrites of us all, we would wax prosperous with about all the taxes paid from liquor revenue pouring into state and national treasuries. But it seems it didn't work out so nice.
They had even gone so far as to say less booze would be drunk if it could be done legally, with a nice savings to all without paying toll to the lawless middleman, and therefore less drunkenness, more happy homes, and so on. Although less liquor would be consumed more people would be employed and the depression would be history. In spite of these inconsistent arguments it was the dope we wanted to believe then—and see what we did. Prohibition went State saloons and small town beer "parlors" came. A comparatively few new jobs were created. But more money had to be spent for beer and such to justify all this, and at a time when economically it could least be spared in most cases. And now there is more habitual beer drinking, more intoxication, more drunken driving.
And many a Certain Person is finding that we still have the bootlegger as a hangover from Prohibition days.

Beverly and Otis Richards of aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Fuller.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

BETTER CHILD PICTURES

Your child pictures will be more interesting if they "tell a story." Show the child busy at something—such as this repair job. And don't stand too far back.

VIRTUALLY every parent takes snapshots of the children—and would like to take better ones. It's not difficult to take a good child picture, and there's no subject more appealing. But most of these pictures can be made still better, if attention is paid to a few common, easily-corrected faults.

The commonest faults are: lack of "story" interest, wrong choice of background or setting, subject too far from camera, and movement which blurs the picture.

Almost any child snapshot will be better if it "tells a story." Simply give the child something to do—dress a doll, draw a picture, fix a toy wagon wheel, blow soap bubbles. Such activity adds interest to the picture—and also makes picture taking more interesting for the child. Give a small baby a rattle or brightly-colored object to play with—it will arouse his interest, and you will get livelier, more expressive pictures.

Be careful in choosing back-grounds. Look beyond the subject—your camera lens will. Avoid a background that has a definite, obtrusive pattern, such as the side of a clap-boarded house. And try for good contrast with the subject. For example, if the child is wearing light-colored clothes, a dark hedge may make a good background. A hilltop with the child against a sky background is also good.

Examine the child snapshots you have taken. If the subject appears too small in most of them, you're taking pictures at too great a distance. See if you can't get closer. It's easy with a focusing camera, or an inexpensive box or folding type that has a "two-point" focus setting. A portrait attachment is also useful for "close-ups" at three and one-half feet or even a bit nearer. You need not fear cutting off part of your subject, provided you locate the subject accurately in the view finder and then do not move the camera when making the exposure.

Movement—either of camera or subject—blurs the picture. Take care to hold the camera still at the moment you snap the shutter. And, with a box camera, pick a time when the subject is not moving rapidly. If you have a finer camera, use a shutter speed of 1/100 second or faster, with a correspondingly larger lens opening.

Watch these points in taking child snapshots. They're all simple, no trouble—and they'll insure you better pictures.

Belief in Fairies

Scientists tell us that many years ago a pigmy race spread all over Europe. They were credited with supernatural powers, and it is from them that we get our belief in fairies, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits magazine. But apart from scientists pure and simple, there are others who believe that fairies still exist. Years ago the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle submitted to the world photographs and facts about fairies. In spite of this, most people are still skeptical. It is not only in places like the wilds of Elre, the mountains of Wales and on the Cornish coasts that people believe in the existence of these little people. There is in Kent a Fairy Investigation society, to which belong scores of rational members, all sure that the "little people" are still to be found.

Why 'John Bull' Represents England

As the personification of the English nation "John Bull" originated in a satire published in 1712 by John Arbuthnot, a Scottish humorist. The work is entitled "The History of John Bull," and was intended as a satire on the duke of Marlborough and the war of the Spanish succession. At first it was attributed to Swift, but Arbuthnot's authorship was later proved beyond doubt. In the satire John is a good-humored, bluff, portly and bull-headed fellow of the country-gentleman type. Lewis Baboon, a Frenchman, Nicholas Frog, a Dutchman, as well as others, figure in the satire. The book fastened the name "John Bull" on the English people.

Hot Springs National Park

Mankind has bathed at spas for better health, particularly in Europe, down through the ages. More than a century ago the United States government set aside Hot Springs, Ark., as a place ordained to specialize in spa treatments and recreation for the people of the nation for all time. American aborigines told of marvelous cures. These same springs were so famous to the Indians that in the long ago they believed the Great Spirit actually lived in them. There is a tale that the various tribes battled from time to time for control of the hot waters. Finally a truce was declared under which all tribes were extended the privilege of using the waters.

Where Seventh World's Poultry Congress Activities Will Center

From July 28 to August 7, 1939, Cleveland's mammoth Public Auditorium will become the Hall of Meetings for the Seventh World's Poultry Congress and Exposition. At the center of the great group of buildings that will house the world's largest industrial exposition, this hall will accommodate the scientific and sectional meetings of the World's Poultry Science Association. These meetings, at which English, French, Spanish and German will be the official languages, will attract poultry scientists from every corner of the world. Here, too, official delegations from at least sixty overseas nations will have their headquarters. Here will be a continuous and interlocking schedule of meetings dealing with every phase of the poultry industry—meetings for the poultry raiser, dealing with poultry culture and marketing, meetings for the processor, the handler and marketer of poultry products—and meetings for the consumer with demonstrations illustrating new and economical ways of preparing poultry for consumption. For a busy eleven days this Hall of Meetings will be the center of interest for a host of a half million or more poultry folk and the "Mecca" toward which worldwide poultrydom will turn its eyes. By securing a membership ticket for $1.00 the public may attend for eleven days with no additional expense.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

OF WHAT CAN A MAN BE PROUD?

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, a gentle and a good man, asked, in dedicating one of his books to a friend, a question which has but one answer. He asked: "Of what can a man be proud if not of his friends?"

Friendship is the finest thing in human experience, but it is not confined to the narrow limits of one person to another person.

There are friendships of different kinds. For example, there are the friendships of business, and they are surely the finest part of business. Just as a man values his personal friends above almost everything else in life, so does a business value its business friendships.

The way a business wins friends is the same way that an individual wins them: by deserving them.

First the business must give its friends value for their money. Second it must keep its word. Third it must not neglect them, else they will leave.

"Friendship," said wise and candid old Doctor Samuel Johnson, "must be kept in repair."

Merchants and manufacturers, realizing this, keep their friendships in repair by going out of the way to give value and service and also by proclaiming their regard for their friends on frequent occasions.

The form of these proclamations is advertising, which appears in the newspaper and tells of the values being offered, of the service available and of reasons why you can become and remain their customers to your profit and satisfaction.

Business men who advertise realize that friendship is a pleasure—and that it is also a responsibility.

Whenever a business man advertises it is a sign that he is seeking the friendship of persons and that he is willing to assume the responsibility of being a good friend.

His advertising is a warranty that he will do his best to be worthy of his friend's confidence by providing the best and the most economical goods. You can't keep friends if you cheat or overcharge.

His advertising is a proof that he values their friendship and intends to be worthy of it. You can't keep friends unless you are willing to live up to your highest ideals, not only for the present, but also for the future.

The advertising in the newspaper is much more than so many commercial announcements. It is an overture toward friendship by a man or a product which means to be worthy of your friendship.

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Givver used Dr. Miles' Nervine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nervine." If you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order.

THE CAT MENACE

The paragraphs below, excerpts from a letter to the Editor of the Portland Press Herald, are published at the request of a local bird lover.

"At this time of the year an agitated plea, unspoken for fear of misunderstanding and giving offence, exists in the community, indeed, all over the Country; namely, please, owners of cats, keep them in at night and during the early morning hours. . . . Birds are necessary. Cats give pleasure often and some destroy mice and rats. Traps are most effective. Cats are birds' worst enemies and slaughter millions of them yearly. Through education, our children are learning the bird-cat problem. Their elders are less up to date. It is the owner of the cat, not the cat, who is to blame when a mother bird is killed leaving some five little hungry birds to die. . . . One pair of birds with its young will destroy from 300 to 1,000 insects a day. . . . Thoughtless owners of cats are driving a rapidly increasing number of families who now recognize the importance of bird life to man's existence to long for cat licenses which would cut down the number of cats owned by the thoughtless. Thousands of cats live on board ships and in small apartments in our big cities without lacking exercise, comfort or air. In terms of bird value the law which fines or imprisons anyone killing a wild bird should also include the owner of any cats destroying a bird."
